"In West Africa, people once used gold dust as a form of money," June told the class. "Lots of pure gold dust added up to great _____. Traders used scales and small weights to weigh the dust. The weights came in different shapes and designs. Some had _____ of the sun or stars or animals on them."

June held up a cloth bag with her name _____ in purple thread. "This is my _____ of weights," she said. Then she emptied the bag with a _____ to show off the pieces.

"This one has the shape of a chair," said the young _____. "It stands for the golden chair of the Ashanti king. Only a person of _____ was allowed to sit in the chair," June explained.
