

Cross-Country Words

territory slogging newsreel

When my Grandma Liz was a little girl, she and her friend Polly got lost on a trip to a National Park. The park was government _____ so they hoped to find a park ranger to help them. However, they could not find a ranger.

They spent a while _____ through mud as they tried to find their way out. Finally, after two whole days in the park, Liz and Polly found a ranger station. The park rangers were so impressed by their story that they told local reporters. A _____ was made about their amazing hike. My Grandma says she didn't care about the attention—she was just glad to be out of the mud!

Cross-Country Words

territory slogging newsreel

When my Grandma Liz was a little girl, she and her friend Polly got lost on a trip to a National Park. The park was government _____ territory _____ so they hoped to find a park ranger to help them. However, they could not find a ranger.

They spent a while _____ slogging _____ through mud as they tried to find their way out. Finally, after two whole days in the park, Liz and Polly found a ranger station. The park rangers were so impressed by their story that they told local reporters. A _____ newsreel _____ was made about their amazing hike. My Grandma says she didn't care about the attention—she was just glad to be out of the mud!