

Guidelines for Writing a Summary Paragraph

- When you write a summary, be brief. Tell only the important parts or main events, not every detail.
- Tell the type of selection it is.
- Name the main characters and the setting.
- Briefly tell the problem or situation that starts the story action.
- Describe what happens in the middle of the story in a few sentences.
- Let the reader know how the problem is resolved or how the story ends.

Guidelines for Writing a Summary Paragraph

- When you write a summary, be brief. Tell only the important parts or main events, not every detail.
- Tell the type of selection it is.
- Name the main characters and the setting.
- Briefly tell the problem or situation that starts the story action.
- Describe what happens in the middle of the story in a few sentences.
- Let the reader know how the problem is resolved or how the story ends.