What Makes Great Instructions?

Instructions tell others how to make or do something.

When you write instructions, remember to do these things.

- Write about something you know how to do or make and which you can clearly explain.
- Begin with an interesting sentence that tells your topic.
- Write all of the steps in order.
- Make each step clear and complete.
- Use order words, such as first, next, then, and finally.
- Write in a way that will make readers want to follow the instructions.
What Makes Great Instructions?

Instructions tell others how to make or do something.

When you write instructions, remember to do these things.

• Write about something you know how to do or make and which you can clearly explain.

• Begin with an interesting sentence that tells your topic.

• Write all of the steps in order.

• Make each step clear and complete.

• Use order words, such as first, next, then, and finally.

• Write in a way that will make readers want to follow the instructions.